

Cardiac Science wins AED contract in Latin America Cardiac Science to deploy AEDs in Medellín, Colombia

May 10, 2011 | Bengaluru, India | Bothell, WA --

The wholly owned subsidiary of Opto Circuits (India) Ltd., Cardiac Science Corporation, a global leader in automated external defibrillator (AED) and diagnostic cardiac monitoring devices, has been awarded a contract to deploy Powerheart® AEDs in the metropolitan area of Medellín, home to 3.5 million Colombians. These AEDs will be placed in Metro de Medellín transportation stations and buildings to protect commuters against sudden cardiac arrest.

Cardiac Science and a valued partner, Ingenieria Hospitalaria, worked together to win the Metro de Medellín contract. Established as one of the first modern mass transportation projects in Colombia, the Metro de Medellín now moves over 400,000 passengers each day through 34 different stations.

“We are pleased to partner with Ingenieria Hospitalaria to provide AEDs that will protect the Medellín community,” said Dave Marver, Cardiac Science Chief Executive Officer. “We believe our fully automatic Powerheart AED G3 Plus is the best solution for any large-scale public access defibrillation (PAD) program.”
